Commentary

The Select International Alpha Fund returned -2.45% for the month (0.4% ahead of benchmark), +17% financial-year-to-date (FYTD) and up +19.35% over the past year (net, after fees). The Fund has performed strongly since London based Mark Hawtin and his global team started managing the fund in January 2023. The strong performance of the fund has come from both stock and sector selection.

Markets continue to digest the various macro drivers and the implications for interest rate policy settings. Ultimately, underlying aggregate economic conditions remain resilient as are US corporate profits. Stubbornness with some core inflation data will simply keep restrictive monetary policy settings for longer. Despite the overall resilient economic momentum globally, investors continue to digest the various geo-political risks, ongoing US-China trade war, geographic and some political polarisation. Further, 2024 is becoming a record year for elections globally with up to 77 taking place (17 of those already held this year) with the US Election the key election event (5 Nov).

In general, there tends to be more market angst and volatility leading into an election that after. However, the many elections being held this year by some of the most populous countries keep investors alert. On US trade policy, there appears to be little difference in the previous US administration (Trump) tariffs on China and the new increases in tariffs from the Biden administration. Alignment of both Democrat and Republican policy on China tariffs may lead to unwinding global economic efficiencies, however this trend is set to continue with US corporate investment pivoting where it can and increasingly investing in South-East Asia, part of the EU and Mexico (leveraging the benefits of NAFTA).

The recent US quarterly reporting period continued to deliver overall beats vs expectations. The resilient US earnings momentum has reinforced the benefits of the current strong structural technology cycle and the ability of corporate America to maintain margins with tighter monetary conditions. However, robust economic conditions with a tight labour market continue to place pressure on core inflation measures and the ability for the US Fed to lower rates any time soon.

The global Fund remains overweight to quality Tech (including AI and cloud) which have been key contributors to the performance. Overweights include Microsoft (MSFT), Alphabet (GOOG), Amazon (AMZN), Meta (META), PayPal (PYPL), (NVIDIA (NVDA), Intuitive Surgical (ISRG) and Seagate Technologies (STX).
